WALLABY GRASS

(Danthonia Pilosa)

A WONDERFUL PASTURE GRASS FOR SHEEP LAND

WHERE RYE GRASS, COCKSFOOT AND CLOVERS WILL NOT GROW or will only stand for a few years Wallaby makes a splendid pasture, it is invaluable for poor class country and where a permanent pasture made up of Rye Grass, Cocksfoot and Clovers would stand, is not recommended. It is best sown in mixtures with the aforementioned grasses and clovers, or with Yorkshire Fog, being very slow to develop.

When once established it spreads rapidly owing to its method of seeding even when heavily stocked and requires to be eaten well down otherwise the plant is apt to become woody.

Sown by itself it is rarely planted in plowed lands and gives best results sown on the ashes of poor class forest land or on burnt scrub or fern country.

IN MIXTURES 3 TO 5 LBS. SEED IS REQUIRED, SOWN BY ITSELF, 15 TO 20 LBS. PER ACRE.

Yields a large amount of succulent pasture, but requires to be kept well grazed otherwise the plants become woody, this last condition is a boom and no detriment to the plant.

There are many known species of Wallaby Grass, the majority of which however are not cultivated. The best known of the cultivated varieties are Danthonia pilosa and Danthonia semi annularis.

Pilosa is rather a superior variety and farmers should always insist on being supplied with this sort and no other.
